

Debutto giapponese al Festival di Cannes

Ha deluso Ichikawa con "Strana ossessione,"

Nonostante il cospicuo numero di morti accumulato sullo schermo, il regista nipponico non è riuscito nell'intento di creare una tragedia moderna - Il solito triangolo anche nel norvegese «La caccia» - Cominciate le retrospettive

Stasera si conclude la popolare trasmissione Sedici campioni gareggeranno per il titolo di «Musichierissimo»

Tre anni di vita - Accanto ai vincitori del «quiz» televisivo, saranno schierate le «vallette» - Nazari, Vallone e Palanca tra gli ospiti d'onore

Alla televisione Margaret e Gogol

Ricchi e poveri, conservatori e progressisti, monarchici e repubblicani, tutti siamo stati invitati alle nozze della principessa Margaret e di Tony Armstrong Jones. Mai principessa ha avuto attorno a sé, forse, tanta platea di amici, di testimoni, di spettatori, curiosi, pronti a scrutare sul viso le emozioni, i sorrisi, le lacrime che le fiabe nascondono dietro un frodo sovrano e severo. E invece questa volta non aveva niente di pronto - e ha regalato un ottimo spettacolo, costruito in primo luogo con il piccolo teatro di Genova sotto la regia di Virginia Puccheri. C'è, sullo schermo, un fratello si sposano e, in un'esplicita televisione, fatto più quando, come in questo caso, si tratta di un testo pieno di movimento e di azione. Tuttavia, fatta questa riserva, va detto che si trattava di uno spettacolo esemplare, costruito in primo luogo con il piccolo teatro di Genova sotto la regia di Virginia Puccheri. C'è, sullo schermo, un fratello si sposano e, in un'esplicita televisione, fatto più quando, come in questo caso, si tratta di un testo pieno di movimento e di azione.
