GENERATE RANDOM TEXT, providing more variety and a more realistic, non-repetitive and naturally uneven look. Simply clicking on a button marked Generate will create random text, placing it in MacLorem's main window and simultaneously placing it on your clipboard so it is ready to paste into the document you are designing. MacLorem goes beyond this simple task in many ways. From the Edit-Preferences menu, you can control the number of paragraphs it generates up to 100, and you can indicate whether paragraphs should be long, medium or short. You can also decide whether MacLorem sometimes creates interrogative (?) and exclamatory (!) sentences. You can turn on or off options for additional punctuation including em-dashes, ellipses and semicolons. You can choose whether the paragraphs it generates should be indented. If you ask for indented paragraphs, you can have them indented with a series of spaces, a single tab character, or separate the paragraphs with an HTML P or BR tag. Going even further, the preferences settings allow you to generate text using vocabulary from twelve different languages: Lorem ipsum Latin an all-upper-case version called LOREM IPSUM. If you get stuck or feel lost, turn on Show Balloons in the Help menu. Pop-up balloons will give you some assistance when you run the cursor over something. MacLorem is freeware. Feedback is always welcomed.

REGIS LACONI

Laconi Battles Hard: After a lowly seventh in race one, Regis Laconi (Ducati Xerox) looked on course for a second place finish in the re-run. When the rains came, he had to make an acrobatic save of a potential high side approaching Lukey Heights, fell from his Ducati, and then bravely restarted, to finish his day with a pair of seventh places. His team-mate Toseland had an even tougher day.

BLACK JEREMY

Finishing race one only 14th, after a bad start and some grip issues throughout. After his second race tangle with Muggerridge at the hairpin, he slipped to eighth in the championship, on 22 points. Lorenzo Lanzi (Ducati SC 999RS) was disqualified from the race when his machine was found to be underweight, promoting all riders behind him up one place, and earning Toseland his two points.

Add more languages, including an old Germanic vocabulary, and modern English. A vocabulary with a greater proportion of longer words. A form of gibberish in which new, semi-random nonsense vocabulary is created, and then that unique vocabulary is used to generate the body copy. Allow the user to use his own vocabulary. When using HTML P tag to mark paragraphs, use a /P tag to close it. (Not strictly necessary, but it would yield a cleaner result. Add more languages, including an old Germanic.

TROY CORSER

Weather Can't Keep Corser Down: The wet start to race day at Phillip Island cleared shortly after morning warm up but the strong north winds gathered pace as the first Superbike race of the day got underway, at 12 noon local time. Race one was taken, in convincing fashion, by local hero Troy Corser (Alstare Corona Extra Suzuki). The 25 knot winds, gusting to 40 knots on occasion, did not help any of the riders in their quests, especially during fast changes of direction into the prevailing gales. As the winds abated slightly, the rains duly returned to halt race two after 12 laps, and leave a ten lap 'wet' race to be completed.

Race 1: Troy Corser took the lead into the first corner and kept it for all 22 laps of the race, winning by a margin of 8.279 seconds, from his own team-mate, Yukio Kagayama. The fight for third place, which was to be determined some 12.551 seconds down on Corser at the flag, was a seven rider battle at one stage, as early runner Andrew Pitt (Yamaha Motor Italia) eventually faded from his impressive start to finish fifth, behind an awesome fight between Chris Vermeulen (Winston Ten Kate Honda) and Max Neukirchner (Klaffi Honda). Touching fairings at one stage, the pair battled it out right to the very end, with Vermeulen scoring the podium, but Neukirchner covering himself in glory. The 21-year-old German's success was.
